The Legendary taste of Chawla's Cream Chicken

A tender broiler is cut into bite-size pieces which are cooked in a combination of milk and cream with a sprinkling of onions and "methi" leaves till they are half done. The cooking is done on a slow fire so that the flavours gently seep into each other and mingle. A secret blend of spices (along with pepper) is added to give in just the right taste. The preparation is totally sans water, red chillies and any type of ghee or oil. Though the dish is not the spicy side, a dash of pepper can be added for those who want it spicier and for those who find green chillies and added to make it really "kororo".

The Legendary taste of Chawla's Cream Paneer

The recipes of Chawla's famous cream delicacies have been zealously guarded through generations. The lovers of Chawla's Cream Paneer flock to authentic outlets for a taste of culinary heaven. Fresh paneer is cooked in a combination of milk and milk and cream with a sprinkling of onions and 'methi' leaves on a slow fire. A secret blend of spices (along with pepper) is added to give it just the right taste. The preparation is totally sans water, red chillies and any type of ghee or oil. Though the dish is not on the spicy side, a dash of pepper can be added for those who want it spicier and for those who find it bland, green chillies are added to make it really "karora".
